Android gives you a few options for transferring your contacts to a new device. By default, everything should be synced when you set up a new device, but even if sync is disabled, it's easy to move your contacts over. The Easy Way: Sync With Your Google Account Almost all Android devices sold outside of China come with Google services, including the ability to synchronize your contacts between devices. This should be enabled by default when you sign in with your Google account, but here's how to make sure. We're writing this guide using a Pixel 2 XL running Android 9.0, but it should look similar on other Android devices. We're also using the stock Google Contacts apps, which you can download from the Play Store. These steps may not be the same on other Contact apps, so if you're having issues, we recommend using Google Contacts. Start by opening the Settings app and tapping "Accounts." Tap your Google account. Tap "Account Sync." Ensure that the "Contacts" toggle is enabled. It must be on for your contacts to synchronize. That's it! Your existing contacts will synchronize with your Google account, and they'll be there on any new Android phone you sign into. The Manual Way: Backup and Restore the Contacts File If your phone doesn't offer Google services—or if you just want to copy things over yourself—you can back up a .vcf file that has all your contacts inside. Start by opening the Contacts app, then select the menu icon in the upper-left. Again, we're using the Google Contacts app here. Tap "Settings" on the menu. Tap the "Export" option on the Settings screen. Tap "Allow" on the permission prompt. This will give the Contacts app access to the photos, media, and files on your Android device. Tap the "Save" button in the lower right. You can move the .vcf file to your new phone by copying it to a USB drive, transferring it to a PC, or your favorite cloud service. When you get the file moved to the new phone, open the Contacts app again. Tap the menu icon in the upper-left. Tap "Settings" on the menu. Tap "Import" on the Settings screen. Select ".vcf file" in the window that pops up. Browse to the .vcf file from your previous phone and open it. Your contacts will import to your new phone, and you can start calling and messaging your favorite people. Getting a new phone can be an incredibly exciting time, however it can quickly become stressful when you want to transfer data from your old phone to your new one. To alleviate the stress and ensure a stress-free migration, this article will cover 5 easy ways to transfer contacts from Android to Android. Check out our other article if you need to transfer contacts from iPhone to iPhone instead. Here are the three contact transfer methods reviewed: Transfer with Contact Transfer Backup and Restore with Droid Transfer Manual Export and Import Sync with Google Account Device-Specific apps Extra: Transfer other files from Android to Android First up, we have the quickest and easiest method we could find - the Contact Transfer software. This nifty app really packs a punch, providing a full set of contact management tools. With it, you can easily transfer your contacts between Android and Android, iPhone to iPhone, between the two platforms, or even backup contacts from your mobile to your computer! The beauty of this method is that all transfers happen locally on your PC. As such, you don't have to worry about uploading your contacts online, or syncing them between accounts. Contact Transfer is software for Windows 10 PCs. You'll also need to get the free Contact Transfer Android app on your phones in order to connect with the software. Let's see how it's done... Download and install Contact Transfer on your PC, then launch it. Choose "Android" for both the Source and Destination of your transfer. Then click Continue. Get the Contact Transfer Android app from the Google Play Store on each of your Android devices. Ensure that both your PC and Android devices are connected to the same Wi-Fi network. Open the Contact Transfer app on your Android device which has all your contacts that you want to copy. Tap "Scan Contact Transfer QR Code". This will open your device's camera. Hold up the camera to the QR code shown under "Source" on your PC. Once your source device is connected, you can repeat the same process by scanning the "Destination" QR code with the Android which you want to transfer contacts to. Now that your devices are connected, you can browse your contacts and select which ones you want to transfer. If you want to select all contacts from your source device, simply click the "All" checkbox. To copy your selected contacts from the source to the destination, click "Transfer"! Summary (Contact Transfer): ✓ Wireless file transfer ✓ Secure local transfers ✓ User-friendly interface ✓ Complete contact management tool ✓ Device to Device ✓ Feature-rich software Receive an email with a link so you can download the free trial on your computer: Note: We respect your privacy. We won't share your Email address with anyone else, or send you spam. Backup and Restore Android Contacts: Droid Transfer Our most powerful method comes next - Droid Transfer software. This option is for users who wish to have an all-in-one Android manager. Using Droid Transfer, not only can you easily transfer contacts from Android to Android, but you can copy other stuff like Messages, Photos, Calendars, Music and more to your computer. Droid Transfer on your PC connects to a free app "Transfer Companion" on your Android device. Then, you can transfer anything you like from Android to PC. Transfer contacts from Android to Android - Here's how: Download Droid Transfer on your PC and launch it. Get the free Transfer Companion App on both of your Android phones. With the phone that contains your contacts, scan the Droid Transfer QR code with the Transfer Companion App to connect Android and PC. Click "Contacts" to view the Android contacts. Click "Backup & Restore", then "Backup". Choose to backup all contacts or select certain contacts, then hit "Backup". Once the backup is complete, disconnect your Android device, and connect the new Android that you want to transfer the contacts to. Click "Backup & Restore" again, then "Restore". Locate and select your saved contact backup file from step 6. Choose to restore all contacts, or select contacts, then hit "Restore". Droid Transfer will then transfer contacts from the backup into your Contacts app on your new phone! See it in action... You can even copy your Android contacts to your PC as vCard or CSV, or directly into Windows Contacts or Microsoft Outlook! We won't share your Email address with anyone else, or send you spam. Manually Export your Contacts and Import on a new Android If you don't mind getting your hands a little dirty, you can back up your contacts on your current Android phone, then restore them on your new Android phone. The exact steps required for this method may vary, depending on which version of Android you are using, the app you use for Contacts, and the make and model of your phone. However, you should be able to achieve this effect by following steps similar to the below: Launch the Contacts app on the Android containing your contacts. Open the menu (an icon with 3 dots, or 3 lines usually). Choose to Export your contacts. You may need to tap Settings before seeing an option to export. You Contacts app will save all of your contacts as a VCF file on your phone. You'll now need to copy or move the VCF file to your new Android. You can do this by connecting your devices to a PC and copying the file to the new device, or by sharing the file using a cloud service like Google Drive. Once the VCF file is saved to your new Android, open the Contacts app, tap to open the menu, and find the Import option. Select the VCF file to import your contacts into the Contact app! Summary (Manually Exporting and Importing): ✓ Local or Online transfers possible ✓ Free ✗ Can be time consuming How to Sync Contacts from Android to Android: Google Account One of the easiest ways to transfer your contacts from Android to Android is using your Google account. You can use Google's Cloud to upload your contacts (and other information like Calendars if you wish), then you can access the information on any device with which you are signed into your Google account. This is a great way to share information across multiple devices, however if you prefer for your information not to be stored in the cloud, you may want to consider Method 1 instead. Let's see how to sync contacts from Android to Android using your Google Account: Grab your old Android phone and open the Settings app. Find and tap "Accounts" in the list, then tap "Google". Tap your Google account. If "Contacts" is disabled, tap to enable it. Start your new Android device and sign-in to your Google account. If "Contacts" was not already toggled "ON" on your old device, it may take some time to upload your contacts to Google's cloud. Once complete, your contacts will also appear in Gmail. When you start up your new Android device and sign-in with your Google account, your contacts (as well as any other information you have chosen to sync with Google) will be synced to your new Android phone. Summary (Google Account): ✓ Quick and Easy ✓ Free ✓ Transfer of many different data types ✗ Requires internet connection ✗ Data must be stored in cloud Device-Specific apps The final method I'd like to briefly talk about is device-specific apps. By this, I mean apps created by the manufacturer of a device to help you switch your device to it. For example, Samsung created the "Smart Switch" app to help users with a new Samsung device transfer across their data from their old device. Smart Switch offers a number of transfer options to suit any setup: device to device using Wi-Fi or USB, and from PC or Mac to your Android. Samsung Smart Switch (Image credit : Samsung) Depending on the make of your new Android device, there may be a device-specific app which could help you migrate your information you your new device. Summary (Samsung Smart Switch): ✓ Direct device to device transfer ✓ Wired or Wireless transfer ✓ Free ✓ No need to store info online ✓ Transfer of many different data types ✗ Limited by device make Transfer other files from Android to Android So, you've mastered how to transfer contacts to a new device, but do you hunger for more?
